

BEGS FOR DEATH AFTER HE TWICE TRIES SUICIDE

John O'Connor Attempted to Leap from Hospital Window When Rescued from Water.

POLICEMAN GUARDS HIM

Man Says He Can't Do Himself or His Family Any Good.

John O'Connor, a middle-aged man, formerly an engineer on the steamship Tanager, anchored off the foot of Forty-third street, Brooklyn, so far has been prevented from killing himself by the timely aid of five men.

Last night he jumped into the harbor off Forty-second street, and was pulled out of the ice and slush by two men. Today in the Norwegian Hospital he leaped from his bed and was diving from the third-story window when a surgeon and two internes grabbed his feet.

"Can't you fellows let a poor man die in peace?" he moaned as the doctors strapped him to his cot after the second rescue. "I'm only in the way—can't you see that? I can do myself, my country and my family no good now, so please let me die, won't you?"

Despite the man's appeals, every effort is being made to restore him to health. A patrolman is now stationed at his bed. When he regains strength enough he will be arraigned on the double charge of attempted suicide.

Fred Muehlen, of No. 10 Forty-third street, and William M. Louchin, of No. 22 Forty-second street, who has figured in numerous rescues in South Brooklyn, heard a splash off the docks on their way home last night. They saw a man's body disappear under the floating ice.

Both threw off their coats and plunged into the icy bay. They finally grabbed O'Connor and towed him to the pier, where the trio were pulled ashore with beachhooks. O'Connor was unconscious and his rescuers were prostrate from the cold. They were taken to their homes in carriages and O'Connor was taken to the hospital.

BOY DRUNK ON PIER.

Ten-Year-Old Lad Says "Mike" Gave Him Wine Dinner. Policeman William Quinn found a ten-year-old boy sleeping off a well-earned "rag" on Pier A, North River, this afternoon. He sent him to the Hudson Street Hospital, where the lad said he is Antonio Constantino, of Stanton, N. J. He told this story:

"Last night Mike and I came to the house. He is my godfather—a great big man. To-day he bring me to New York and we go to place where he says he first hand. There we have a fine dinner and lots of wine. That's all. Then policeman pick me up. I don't know where Mike live. The boy was sent to the Children's Society, and the police are trying to find Mike."
